RE: Blue Marble University Medical School M.D. Degree Not for Clinical Practice

We apologize for this form letter, but we get many inquiries from potential applicants who may not have studied our website and all the topics covered in the Navigation Bar/Menu at: <https://bluemarbleuniversitymedicalschoo.com/>

We offer an Executive Style M.D. degree (Doctor of Medicine) for use in medical careers that do not involve patient care. As clearly stated on our website:

Notice: The MD degree issued by Blue Marble University Medical School can never be used for physician licensing purposes, to satisfy any education requirements for licensing as a physician or other health care provider, or for any career or profession involving direct patient care. In the USA and most countries, it is illegal to hold oneself out as a licensed physician unless one is in fact licensed.

For U.S. and Canadian students, what this means is:

That you will not qualify to sit for (take) any U.S. medical licensing exams.

You cannot transfer any of our credits to any program leading to any health care license such as nurse or physician's assistant.

You cannot use our program, degree, or courses for any licensed health care profession.

You do not qualify for any clinical rotations or training.

You cannot become a physician treating patients.

Other Countries: We are not expert on the rules and regulations for other countries including non-western countries, such as India or African countries as to whether our M.D. degree could qualify you for additional clinical training in your country leading to eventual licensure as a practicing physician. However, our MD degree is not intended for any such purpose.

What is the purpose of our M.D. degree: Our M.D. degree trains you in the medical arts for rewarding careers in Medicine that do not involve direct patient care one-on-one. Graduates are on the same footing as any other unlicensed graduate of a traditional medical school that chose not to take any licensing exam nor to complete clinical training.

Career paths open to our MD graduates are fully described on our home page:
<https://bluemarbleuniversitymedicalschool.com/>

as well as on our page detailing Non-Clinical Careers for M.D.s:
<https://bluemarbleuniversitymedicalschool.com/non-clinical-careers-for-m-d-degrees/>

So, sorry to disappoint, but we serve students wishing to pursue careers in medically related fields that do not involve you treating specific patients.

Our graduates find homes in the pharmaceutical industry, government and health insurance regulatory agencies, the medical insurance industry, clinic and nursing home administration, research, medical writing, and the medical devices industry.

Thank you so much for your inquiry.

If, after careful study of our main website and all topics noted in the top Navigation Bar or Menu, you still have questions, we are happy to help.

Please direct all further inquiries to:

And many thanks for your inquiry!!
